Vulcan Youth In Farm Group's Eastern Tour

Twenty-four of the 28,000 young people participating in the Centennial Commission's Voluntary Youth Travel Program are a group of young Alberta farming people. They are taking part in the Alberta Agricultural Centennial Youth Travel project, organized by the Federation of Agriculture with the financial assistance of a Centennial Commission grant.

The travel program for the Alberta group has been arranged in co-operation with the Quebec Farmers' Association, Macdonald College, Montreal, and the Ontario Rural Learning Association.

Brian Uily of Vulcan is one of the group that leaves Edmonton July 19 for Montreal where they join groups from Ontario and Quebec at Macdonald College. They will visit Expo 67 on "Alberta Day", July 22, spending a total of three days in Montreal.

This will be followed by a tour of five or six farms in Quebec Province, including a three-day visit in farm homes.

The group returns via Toronto to Alberta, Aug. 9.

The Quebec Farmers' Association will send a group of 12 young people to Alberta in exchange. They arrive in Red Deer July 5 and will attend the F.U.A. Junior Annual Meet at the Gold Eye Camp west of Rocky Mountain House, visit local farms and spend a day at the Calgary Stampede. July 16 to 22 they attend the camp with other Alberta young people at Gold Eye Camp.

The Youth Travel Program for Voluntary Agencies is a program sponsored by the Centennial Commission to foster among young Canadians a greater awareness of the significance of the Centennial of Confederation, a greater understanding of the people of regions other than their own, and a greater appreciation of their country and its achievements.

The program provides financial assistance to voluntary agencies organizing travel and exchange projects for young people which make a positive contribution to the celebration of Canada's Centennial.

gifts to the guest of honor. Lynda was assisted in opening the gifts by her mother, Mrs. Ruth Dann, Miss Karen Boutland and Miss Carol Wellman. After the gifts were displayed, Lynda most graciously thanked everyone.

Lunch was served by the ladies of the Candlelight Circle.

TROUBLES, TROUBLES. About the only visible scar remaining from the late season blizzard near the end of May is shown above. This unusual view of the town water tower is from inside the arena which lost an entire span of roof due to the weight of snow which collapsed it from side to side.

Taken during the 4-H Show and Sale, June 17 the picture shows Pete Samaroden handling a calf-weighing chute a few feet to the right of the goal area on the winter time ice surface. The expected annual rain came down the night before the show, leaking through the roof of the arena onto the sawdust but Saturday morning conditions were much drier than expected possibly due to the great air circulation from the open end of the arena.

In an inspection some years ago, this span was found weak and now town councillors are faced with the thorny problem of what

Some Hail Damage

Crops Making Good Growth As Warm Weather Holds

The Alberta Wheat Pool crop reports from 12 points in the County show that all crops are making good growth under the influence of the warm weather but that stubbled-in crops will start deteriorating unless rains are received this week. Crops are heavy and shallow-rooted.

Scattered hail storms last week did varying damage in many parts of the County. Greatest damage was apparently in the Champion district, both east and west of town, with up to 80% damage to rye and up to 50% to wheat in some areas. Damage was not widespread, though.

Rainfall in the County of Vulcan area since May 1 averages about four inches.

The Vulcan District Recreation Society evolved from a group of sportsmen who at one time were considering renovating the arena but felt that investment in the old building would not be feasible. A recreation complex has since been envisioned which would include an artificial ice arena but this can not take place in the near future and will not help the immediate problem.

CCHS Cougars Need Equipment For Training

(By C.C.H.S. Football Reporter)

CCHS Cougars of the newly formed Southern Alberta Football League will have far to go before the start of the season (with our first home game against Picture Butte on Saturday, Sept. 16). There are many jobs to do, and not many hands to do them. Our main job is in the preparation of the field, facilities and training equipment.

Football is a game of hard hitting, and so the ground must be as grassy and soft as possible. During training the players use imitation opponents, in the form of old rolled-up mattresses, or duffle bags filled with something nice and soft, to practice their blocking and tackling. There must be much unused junk of this type in a hundred attics or basements around Vulcan, and if you want to contribute to the success of the team, why not give Dave Philpot a ring, and he will gladly come round and take it off your hands?

We want CCHS field, home of the Cougars, to be the brightest place in town next fall, with giant scoreboard, bleachers, refreshments, public address system—in fact, the full works. Our colors are gold and red and our cheerleaders will no doubt find a winning combination of the two to liven up the proceedings. We want everyone to feel that the Cougars are representing the County throughout Southern Alberta, so don't forget to be there when the first whistle blows!

To correct a slight mistake in our last news item, the Chief Coach of the Cougars is not Dave Philpot, but our counsellor and guidance teacher Don Beggs. Mr. Philpot is working in a minor coaching capacity, with general management as his main concern.

New Telephone Numbers For D.A. & Home Ec.

The telephone numbers of the District Agriculturist and Home Economist in the County Building have been changed to 485-2236 and 485-2237. Either number can be dialled to get Blair Shaw or Frances Cullen.

Official opening of the new addition to the County Building is expected to be held later this summer.

Natural gas has been in use in Alberta for more than 75 years, since it was first put into service for street lighting in Medicine Hat.

Pioneer Descendants Hold Reunion

Sixty three signed the guest book when a family reunion of pioneer descendants and relatives of the Robert, John and Thomas Love, pioneer settlers in the Vulcan district was held at the High River Memorial Park on July 7th. The first reunion was held in 1964 when there were seventy one signing the guest book. It was at this time that they decided to meet again in Canada's Centennial year.

Those attending from out of town were Robert Love of Turner Valley, from Calgary the following, Viola DeWitt, Standard; Allan and Edward and Mabel Love, Charlie and Edith Steiner, Bob and Marjorie McCaskill and family, Cora Hynman and son Leslie, Shirley Love and Karan Study.

From B.C., Scotty and Bernice Love, Kelowna; Eva Brown, Dawson Creek; Ernest and Lila Derfler and family, Farmington; Una Crews, Canoe; and Fay Schuler, Golden; Jake Beckner, Radville, Sask.; Jim and Hilda Stier and son Allan and Mrs. Wayne (Carol) Stier from Blackie; Cecil and

Doreen and family from Kathryn, Herronton.

The following all of Vulcan were Alva and Clara Love, Clifford and Marie Love, Willard and Mabel Love, Frank and Marjorie Love and family, Ivo Love and family, Allan and Heather and baby Cathy Love, Clarence and Lena Brown and David. Visitors attending were Miller White and daughter Leona, Roy Jacobson from Vulcan, Betty Harper from Turner Valley, Edna Lemming and John Cortiso from Calgary and Melvin and Lovercia Bechtel from

All reported having a wonderful time. The weather was perfect and the eats were something to remember. There were ball games and the granddads tried to show the grandsons how they used to do it, but the day after showed who scored the most runs. The eyesight and judgement of the umpires is still in question.

After all the groans, aches and pains, everyone wanted to know when another reunion would be held.

SUMMER RE-RUN. John Yesno (above) plays an unfortunate young Indian who comes to the city in search of work and a new life in CBC-TV's, The Last Man In The World, seen recently over this network. This episode which was on the Wojcek series won the coveted Golden Nymph award at the International TV Festival in Monte Carlo this year.

REPORT FROM PARLIAMENT HILL

During our Centennial Year we have been reminded at every turn of Canada's history over the last hundred years, but on the anniversary of our HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY a few thoughts on Canada's future are perhaps appropriate. In this respect there are almost innumerable subjects that could be mentioned, but one is of paramount importance—Canada's Constitution.

Some sort of meeting must be held just as soon as possible to provide Canada with a new Constitution. The British North American Act, passed 100 years ago, was no doubt a reasonably good Constitution at that time, but over the years it has increasingly failed to meet Canada's needs. Most of Canada's present-day problems have their roots in our existing Constitution. In the last few years, a number of Provinces, such as Quebec, British Columbia and Newfoundland, have so interpreted our Constitution that in some respects they are becoming more and more like independent states. If Canada is to remain a nation and develop into the great and unified country that it should, the Federal Government must have greater authority in a number of fields. This authority can only be acquired by consent, and such consent can only be obtained by a Conference of the Federal and Provincial Governments.

A Conference of this nature should not only be made up of representatives of the Federal and Provincial Governments, but also of other prominent Canadians, with appropriate backgrounds. It won't be easy to hammer out a new Constitution as there are many different points of view respecting the necessary fields of authority of the Federal and Provincial Governments, but it can be done. These same difficulties were present in 1885, but the Fathers of Confederation had the determination and the broadmindedness to work to appropriate compromises.

Two main decisions must be made:

(1) A concise and appropriate division of powers between the Federal and Provincial Governments.

(2) The Federal and Provincial Governments must have the necessary fund-raising (taxation) powers to be able to finance the fields of Government which they will be employed to administer.

At this present time, the Provinces and Municipalities have much of the expensive work of Government to carry out—education, road building, welfare, etc., and insufficient means of acquiring revenue to carry on these projects. This has led to many very unfair tax burdens. At the present time, Canada is a "tax jungle," and there are no overriding principles on which taxes are based, except to get the most feathers with the least amount of squawk.

One of the finest collections of Canadian currency in existence is on display during Expo 67 at the Main Branch of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Montreal. It is part of the Bank's own collection of coins and notes which traces the development of Canadian currency since pre-Confederation days. It includes many collectors' items, and is being viewed above by two hostesses from the Expo 67 branch, Donna Kennedy (left) and Alice Archambault. Free-standing showcases allow visitors to inspect closely the colourful bills that have been issued by Canadian banks. Many of the bills with a face value of only one, five or 10 dollars, have a value to collectors of several hundred dollars. Showing of the collection coincides with the 100th anniversary of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. It features examples of currency issued by the 14 banks that have combined to form the Commerce, including The Canadian Bank of Commerce and The Imperial Bank of Canada. The display of bills (left) issued by the Eastern Townships Bank in the mid-1800s is an eyecatcher for collectors, while the currency issued by Canadian banks in the early 1900s attracts the most attention because of its colour and variety.

CONTROLLING ALGAE IN FARM DUGOUTS

Now is the time to take steps to control algae growth in your farm dugout; not late in the summer when a heavy green scum has formed on the top of the water. D. E. Darby, the Alberta Department of Agriculture's Regional Extension Engineer at Lethbridge, points out that killing algae in the late summer results in the decaying material imparting a very offensive taste and odor to the water. Decaying algae can present a real problem for those intending to use the water from the dugout during the winter months for either their livestock or household requirements.

Mr. Darby says that copper sulfate (bluestone) is most frequently used for treating algae in farm dugouts. A solution of one part per million, which works out to 1 pound of copper sulfate per 100,000 gallons of water or 5 to 8 pounds of copper sulfate in an average-sized farm dugout, kills most algae.

To keep the water supply clean, Mr. Darby recommends treating dugouts in mid-June, before the algae growth is very evident, and repeating the treatment once or twice more during the summer. Dilute copper sulfate solutions of less than 5 parts per million are not dangerous to animal life.

The usual way of applying the copper sulfate treatment is to put the correct amount in a sack and then drag the sack back and forth across the water until the copper sulfate has completely dissolved. Another satisfactory method entails dissolving the copper sulfate in a barrel of water and then spraying the surface of the water in the dugout with the solution.

THE HOMEMAKER

MISS FRANCES ANN CULLEN
District Home Economist

Box 480, Vulcan — Phone 485-2117

Dear Homemakers:

The following is an article from "Food-News and Views" by R. A. Greenberg, Ph.D., Chief Microbiologist; Swift and Company, which is very timely.

Summer and picnic season take the family out of doors for many meals. Hearty appetites cause tender fried chicken, combination meat sandwiches, and crisp salads to disappear, like magic under the warm sunlight. Unfortunately, warm sunlight can also detract from the enjoyment of outdoor eating. Germs capable of causing severe gastro-intestinal upsets thrive in picnic foods which have not been adequately refrigerated. Keeping foods chilled is a simple rule, as are other common-sense habits that add up to safe picnicking.

The manufacturer of food products has good reason to ensure that any item bearing his label is pure and wholesome. A potent team of highly trained government and industry scientists is constantly on the alert to prevent any possible hazard in foods up to the time of purchase.

FOODS ARE SOMETIMES MISHANDLED

The overwhelming majority of food poisoning outbreaks are traceable to mishandled food in the home. One of the chief villains in the picnic picture is a golden hued bacterium, impressively named: Staphylococcus Aureus. This germ is found practically everywhere; for example, on the skin, in the soil, on dust particles, in the sprays from sneezes and coughs. Troublesome bacteria can easily find a way into your picnic lunch once the food packages are opened in the home kitchen. Under suitable conditions, the organisms can multiply undetected in a food and produce a poison guaranteed to make a life miserable for anyone unlucky enough to eat it. The trick is to keep conditions unsuitable. Our golden enemy needs a fairly warm environment in which to produce the poison. About 4 hours above 50° F. will produce the poison in food containing this bacterium. Thus, keeping the picnic basket out of the warm sunlight is a good rule. Make sure that susceptible foods—such as salads, cream pastries, cheese, cured and salted meats, sandwiches, casseroles, and other moist prepared foods—are kept properly chilled. Families who carry food any distance from home and the home refrigerator would do well to invest in an attractive modern cooler that is insulated to keep food cool. Some even have separate compartments for food and ice.

OTHER TROUBLEMAKERS

A group of bacteria called SALMONELLA is also potential cause of post-picnic distress. They produce a true gastrointestinal infection rather than a poison. Although the symptoms produced by salmonella infection are not usually as severe as those caused by Staphylococcus aureus poisoning, they usually last much longer, 3 to 4 days compared to 12 to 24 hours. The salmonella may be introduced into foods by one of several routes. Obviously, foods should not be handled by anyone suffering from nausea, diarrhea, or other gastrointestinal upset. However, many people are unwitting carriers of these bacteria. They harbor the germs in their bodies without having symptoms of the disease. Salmonella are often found in low numbers on the surface of uncooked foods. The germ can be picked up easily by the hands while handling raw vegetables, meats and poultry, and subsequently introduced into sandwiches, salads, custards and other prepared foods in which bacteria can thrive.

GUIDES TO SAFE PICNICS

1. Keep processed foods such as custards, meat salads, egg or potato salads and moist sandwiches chilled or piping hot to prevent the growth of bacteria.
2. Don't allow these foods to remain in the 50° to 120° F. range more than four hours.
3. Chill thoroughly such cooked foods as fried chicken, baked ham, meat loaf, and fried fish before putting them in the picnic hamper, or better yet, into a cooler if the food will not be eaten for several hours. For hot service heat over the grill at the picnic ground.

3. Don't handle foods if you have any gastric upset.
4. Wash your hands thoroughly and often. This is particularly important if you have handled raw foods and intend to prepare salads, sandwiches, and other foods that receive no further cooking before being served.

5. Keep insects and animals away from foods during preparation.

6. Remove cooked chicken from broth immediately to cool before using in salads, sandwiches, and other creamed dishes.

7. Wrap sandwiches and other prepared foods carefully before carefully packing into the picnic hamper.

Get well wishes go out from the community to Alfred Sutor, a patient in the Calgary General Hospital, and to Mrs. Leslie MacAllister and Clarence Laycraft who both recently underwent surgery in the Holy Cross Hospital.

IN BUSINESS. Swimming's the thing for these two months among the youngsters of town and surrounding countryside, as well as for many adults. To get a photo of the swimming pool as it awaited morning classes the first of this month, required a high, revealing vantage point. A power pole by the pool's entrance was the answer but the problem became complicated by an Advocate photographer who couldn't handle those climbing spurs and Calgary Power man Howie Klippert who could handle the pole but not the camera. There was no question as to who would climb the pole. Calgary Power did and Howie came through with a descriptive shot of a pleasant end of town.
